What is the Police Auxiliary?

The Eagle River Police Auxiliary is an all volunteer force that assists the Eagle River Police Department or other organizations within the community.

Many of the functions that an Auxiliary Officer would perform are community service functions such as assisting with parades, patrolling during fairs and community activities or conducting traffic control during special events. Auxiliary Officers are also responsible for parking enforcement in Eagle River.

Auxiliary Officers will spend many of their hours interacting with people out in the community, residents and tourists alike. As Eagle River is one of the largest tourist destinations in the nation, Auxiliary Officers will ultimately be ambassadors of not only the police department but the City of Eagle River as well.

BENEFITS

There are many benefits to being an Auxiliary Officer. One of the greatest benefits is having the ability to interact positively with people out in the community and deriving the satisfaction of giving back to the community. In addition to that self satisfaction, there are other benefits that are more tangible. Being an Auxiliary Officer provides for experience that can help boost a resume. In addition to experience gained, Auxiliary Officers receive skills training in the areas of professional communication, traffic control, radio communications, defensive tactics, vehicle operations, report writing and many other areas.

QUALIFICATIONS

Being an Auxiliary Officer means being someone who is entrusted with a position of authority in the community. For that very reason, not everyone can be an Auxiliary Officer. Anyone wishing to become an Auxiliary Officer must meet the following minimum qualifications:

- Must be at least 18 years of age and a High School graduate.
- May not have any felony convictions.
- May not have a recent significant traffic record.
- Must be able to stand or walk for several hours at a time, possibly during inclement weather.
- Must pass a background check.
